What is a GYRO?

A gyro is a wonderful Greek creation.

The best versions are mixtures of ground beef and lamb that is seasoned with Greek spices, then pressed together and slowly cooked on revolving vertical spits. The spits allow the fat to drain off, and as the meat turns and cooks slowly it develops a highly prized cooked crust, which expert gyros makers slice off with a long knife.

Once the slices are ready, they're piled into a warmed pita topped with onions, tomatoes and served with a delicious homemade tzatziki, which is a Greek sauce made from yogurt and fresh cucumbers.

A gyro (pronunciations vary - GEER-oh, ZHEER-oh, YEE-roh or JEER-oh are all acceptable) makes great take-out food and it's well-suited to an impromptu picnic or lunch on the run.
